A good ball player is one thing. A money player is something else.

There are both money ball clubs and money ball players. You can spot them any day in the almanac when there's something at stake.

A star performer may carry a high batting average opposite his name. He may have but few mistakes recorded in his fielding figures. His workmanship, both on the offense and defense, may be spectacular and brilliant, but if he cracks in the critical pinch plays he doesn't qualify for a money ball

THREE OF 'EM.

You can lay your finger on the great est money players today without much skipping around through the averages How about Larry Gardner of the In-dians? How about Harry Hooper of the Red Sox? How about Eddie Collins of the White Sox?

That's the gang as they stand today. When a play comes up to them on which rests the outcome of a bat tle they will deliver the goods. If a hit is needed to score the winning run they will crack it out nine times out of ten. If a bit of super-fielding will save a game they rise to the occasion. LARRY GARDNER.

The most dangerous man at the bat in the American league right now is this fellow they call Larry Gardner. Ask any pitcher in the circuit who they would rather face in a tight hole -Babe Ruth, the socking terror, or Larry Gardner, the famed Clevelander who is like a gold bond when there's a panic on Wall street. They will answer Larry without even emitting a hiccough.

During the Indians' September drive toward the house that Jack Pennant built Gardner has showed his moneyplaying tendencies in big bank rolls. EDDIE COLLINS.

Eddie Collins is just as brilliant as ever, any way you take him. Dangla the old bank roll in front of him and he will play his head off to get re-
